NOTICE FROM SUSHILAND

Dear Sushigangsters,

Not good news regarding the continued publication of PRO WRESTLING SUSHI. Alas, this sheet is folding as of this notice.

Essentially, because my mountain bike injuries (sustained when I "Cactus Jacked" street pavement at 30-mph in June) were so traumatic to the entire upper right region of my body (broken collar bone plus torn muscles and ligaments in my arm and back which are still causing me difficulty), it is going to take longer than originally anticipated for the entire area to mend.

According to my doctors, I'm looking at another four months of physical therapy and non-surgical treatment before a decision (or non-decision) regarding surgery is made. Without surgery, the best case senario for full recovery is late spring or early summer next year. (With surgery, if needed, full recovery could be as late as fall or winter of '95.)

With so many uncertainties as to when I'd be able to resume publication, and with the fact that it is simply too uncomfortable (and at times painful) to do all the things I need to do to publish this newsletter each month without the full use of my right arm, and that doing almost everything "lefthanded" is so time consuming (and no longer the "lark" it was a few issues ago), and that the injury really crapped out my summer, caused me to get behind in some personal projects and responsibilities that still need attention, and will probably cause me certain complications when I return to teaching mutant ninja junior high schoolers in September (like writing homework assignments on the board...Ha-Ha-Ha!), something had to give, and, alas, it was this sheet.

At first, I thought, I could just announce another hiatus, but since it could be up to a year before SUSHI returned, I felt it not right to keep everyone's money while not publishing for such a lengthy period. Also, because doing everything else seems to take so much longer with a bum shoulder and arm, I have not been able to spend as much time on wrestling as usual, and I'm afraid the quality of SUSHI, and the humor from Sushiland, would suffer.

Naturally, the decision to fold (for a second time in the history of this sheet) is a difficult one because I have loved doing it and because I've made so many friends with SUSHI being such a nice way to regularly share our humorous views about a sport that has been such a grand part of our lives.

Will SUSHI make a comeback down the road? For a number of reasons, my gut says, probably not. So, Sushidudes, I'll be thinking of you. In the meanwhile, happy trails, wear your riding helmets, and leave the circus stunts and bicycle-flips to dare devils and loocha boys like Sabu, Rey Mysterio Jr., and Cactus Jack who, unlike some of us, can take a licking and keep on ticking... seemingly without missing a beat! Sincerely,

Jeff Mullins

PS: This "notice" is, of course, free of charge. Your subscription balance in dollars & cents is noted in red on the envelope. Your refund is enclosed. (Some of you received your original checks back due to the fact that a few of them, for some reason, were not cashed.) Also, my apologies to everyone who sent in material for the cancelled post-SummerSlam issue of this sheet.

Finally, my nine and a half year old wrestling-obsessed nephew Jubie Jay Mullins was held back in the fourth grade again, this time because of a history assignment he wrote discussing how the Civil War could have been avoided had someone named Jim Cornette been alive back then and put in charge of the slavery issue. According to school principal Ms. Ida Fartzapon, Jubie's paper was the "most grotesque piece of work" ever witnessed in the long and fabulous history of Lucretia Mott Elementary School. Sigh...

Yes, everyone, we'll miss ya. Love and peace, brudders.---JDM
